SIXTH FRAMEWORK PROGRAMME

Introduction

In the URBAN-NET description of work, a dissemination plan is intended to set out the strategy for disseminating the final outputs of the network. This particular work, however, is not done in isolation and builds on previous (specific) dissemination plans and schemes which were drawn up earlier in the project. The findings from work package 2 as well as a networking and engagement report drawn up by an external advisor will form the cornerstones of this plan.

Important features of the dissemination plan include the full use of the website for the project and its partners, encouragement and support of the delivery of peer-reviewed journal articles, presentation of findings at scientific conferences and other events, and the development of training and reference materials for use by those in education, professional institutions and statutory organisations. In this way, the impact and 'reach' of the project will be guaranteed beyond its own lifetime.

URBAN-NET Context

URBAN-NET is a European ERA-NET – a network of mainly research funding bodies from 13 European countries established within the European Research Area (ERA) initiative and funded through the 6th Framework Programme for Research and Technological Development (FP6). UN-Habitat is also a partner. URBAN-NET has a regional as well as a national dimension. The coordinator is the Scotland & Northern Ireland Forum for Environmental Research (SNIFFER).

Creation of the ERA is part of the delivery of the European Union's Lisbon strategy, the general aim being to improve the effectiveness of Europe's research efforts. ERA-NETs are the mechanisms through which the managers of national and regional research programmes can collaborate on issues of common concern, engaging in transnational networking and coordination of national and regional research programmes so as to reduce duplication of research efforts, open national research programmes to researchers from other countries and pool resources. It is expected that in the longer term national and regional research funders will design and administer joint research programmes open to researchers from all the participating countries.

The general purpose of URBAN-NET is 'to support urban sustainability'. There is a focus on commissioning research which tackles cross-cutting urban sustainability issues – rather than focusing on individual sectoral problems – and on the use of integrated approaches. The stated aims of the project go beyond making an impact on the partners' own actions as research funding bodies to include policy influence, and possibly also helping to fill a perceived gap in funds available for integrated urban research at European level, since the current FP7 does not include a specific urban theme. The project includes an activity (Work Package 3) dedicated to developing joint understanding of the future agenda for urban research informed by links with policy.

The URBAN-NET project started in 2006 and is due to end in July 2010. Substantial progress has been made to date in:

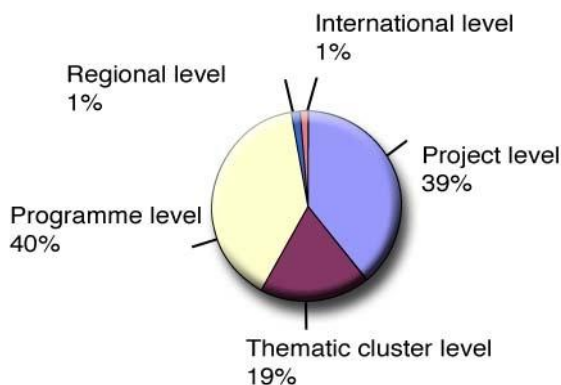

- collecting and analysing comparative information on national and regional urban research programmes across Europe, identifying good practice in the way such research is funded and administered;
- a searchable database with urban research programmes on URBAN-NET's website;
- holding two calls for research proposals;
- consultation with stakeholders to identify strategic research areas (notably at a workshop held in Berlin in June 2008). The four priority areas identified were integrated urban management and city leadership; sustainable land-use in poly-centric city regions; climate change in the urban context; and health, well-being and public-spaces. A thematic research framework brochure has been published.

The partners are aiming for long-term cooperation and are currently exploring various mechanisms by which they can continue working together after project funding ends.

Goal of dissemination plan

The goal of this dissemination plan is to devise a plan that ensures accessibility to, and dissemination of project results in addition to the exchange of knowledge facilitated by URBAN-NET activities.

As can be seen in the figure below, research programme results are usually not disseminated on an international or even regional level. Here lies an important task for the URBAN-NET consortium: promoting (the dispersion of) outcomes of urban sustainability research. The intention is to disseminate knowledge to a wide array of organisations and levels.

Graph 1: Programme outcomes dissemination organisational levels. Response rate: 91%. Respondents could give more than one answer. Based on URBAN-NET Deliverable 2.5 – April 2008.

SIXTH FRAMEWORK PROGRAMME

URBAN-NET can be seen as a bridge between research and practice, striving for broader and deeper dissemination of research results, mainly at regional and international policy levels, which are currently neglected according to the graph above. This policy gap was discussed during URBAN-NET's fourth Stakeholder Workshop, held November 2009 in Stockholm. URBAN-NET aims to disseminate research results; knowledge acquired from international exchanges and relevant information about calls for proposals to a wide spectrum of interested parties. This dissemination plan is intended to help achieve effective and long-term knowledge exchange on urban sustainability research amongst all relevant actors.

Unique Selling Point

There is no European dissemination source solely devoted to urban research. This is something that URBAN-NET could address. It should go further than simply listing research programmes in different countries, but could include relevant outputs, outcomes and impact evaluation of different research programmes. Language, however, is an obstacle as few countries publish their results in English.

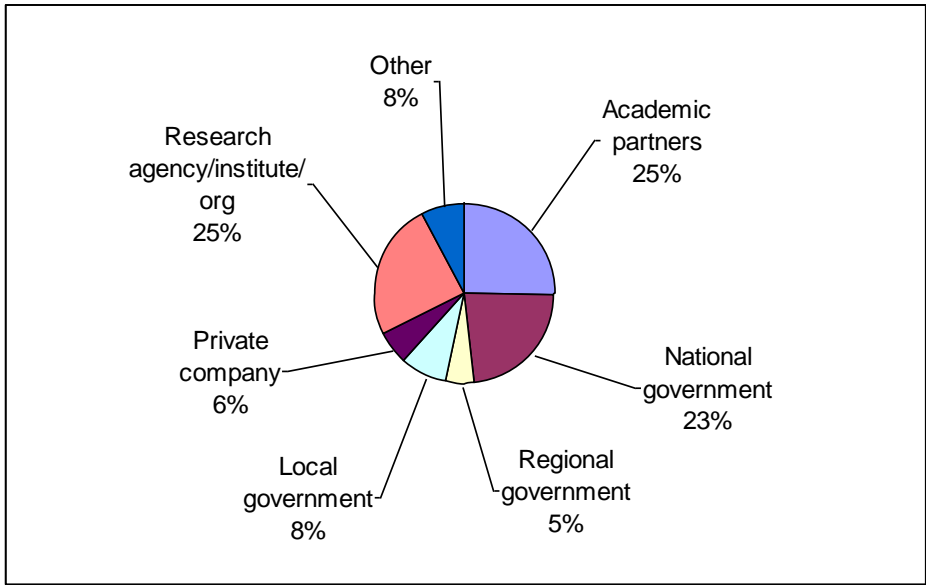

Five pillars

There are five important questions that need to be asked when disseminating output. The first is the most crucial, what will be disseminated, followed immediately by the question: to whom? In addition, it needs to be clear why this specific knowledge is to be spread (see also goal of dissemination plan), as well as how and when.

Knowledge: what has been produced so far

Deliverable 2.4: "Dissemination plan covering knowledge about planned, existing and completed research programmes"

This deliverable from Work Package 2 focussed on the dissemination of national and regional research programmes across Europe. URBAN-NET collected information on over 70 such programmes, examining how to improve access to them by relevant sectors across Europe. Particular attention is paid to the target groups for URBAN-NET's products, identified in the graph 2 below.

Graph 2:
Percentages of actors active in European research programmes, based on URBAN-NET Deliverable 2.3 database – December 2007.

The graph gives an indication of the sectors that URBAN-NET could approach for dissemination and exchange of knowledge on urban sustainability research including the thematic research framework, joint activities outputs and the research project results.

Strengthening the URBAN-Net Consortium: Networking and Engagement at European level

In the Networking and Engagement report, which was confidential to URBAN-NET partners, Liz Mills identifies important contacts for the consortium to help ensure that the project has access to key agencies and organisations. The report also touches upon information relevant to this dissemination plan.

What will be disseminated

The results of the first and second call for research proposals (2008 and 2010 respectively) need to be published and distributed. In addition, the proposals and mid-term reviews/results can also be published.

Although funding of urban sustainability research is a core URBAN-NET activity, the network also serves as an intermediary between policy, practice and research. Therefore, opportunities for new research projects and programmes (i.e. calls for proposals in the field of urban sustainability) also demand attention. URBAN-NET is not just a network that funds research calls, it also aims to inform the research community of developments at all levels; international, European, national, regional and local.

In addition, URBAN-NET can choose to join other networks to become more widely known in urban Europe and to influence European policy and initiatives (e.g. Framework Programmes, Joint Programming).

More specifically:

- Dissemination of (funded) research results
- Dissemination of relevant news, events, funding opportunities
- Dissemination of network activities
- Ensuring URBAN-NET is widely known and considered an important stakeholder.

Target groups

As mentioned in the previous section, the relevant target groups for URBAN-NET were researched and communicated in deliverable 2.4 and provide a starting point.

Academic partners and research organisations

Relevant universities/research institutes working on urban and/or climate change programmes. This list is by no means exhaustive and could and should be updated regularly.

Local and regional governments

In addition to the national governments, local and regional governments can also benefit from knowledge produced by URBAN-NET as well as additional information and urban news. Of course it is not possible to list all local and regional governments that are relevant for URBAN-NET. However, there are networks that give easy access to a wide range of European cities and regions. They should also be approached when spreading URBAN-NET's products and knowledge. Contacts with organisations mentioned below ensure dissemination to the local level.

Relevant private companies

Depending on the topic of for example a research documents, private companies can be contacted and/or encouraged to cooperate. For example, when writing about solar panels, a company such as The Sun Factory could be a relevant stakeholder.

European Union initiatives

- Committee of the Regions: <http://www.cor.europa.eu>

Available tools

Website and other Internet tools

- Dissemination via URBAN-NET website. The updated website can include a conference registration form, possibility to send in papers on urban sustainability research, an open forum for debate and questions.
- Using other (urban) websites to disseminate research results, URBAN-NET events, e.g. website of the European Urban Knowledge Network, URBACT, INTA, EUROCITIES, etc.
- Networking websites, such as LinkedIn, Twitter, and so on.

(Bi-)Annual conference

A returning conference organised by the URBAN-NET consortium, focusing on a specific theme. The conference returns every year, or every two years, and has a different focus each time. An example is the EUROCITIES conference.

Printed (thematic) publications, e.g. pilot call results

Develop, print and distribute publications, such as the thematic research framework. Other possible publications: pilot call and final call project findings published in a research anthology.

Thematic conferences

The consortium could organise a conference with specific topical themes. URBAN-NET could also try to increase attendance/presentation by partners at conferences organised by others. The management group has already participated in the Social Polis conference, for example, and represented the consortium at other urban- related events. It is an excellent opportunity to network and disseminate URBAN-NET material.

Publications in academic journals

Publications containing URBAN-NET contributions can enhance visibility and credibility of the network, e.g. International Innovations journal and the European parliament magazine, including special editions published for Green Week which have wider circulation.

Partnerships

Engage in partnerships with other relevant networks to widen our scope. Several networks (such as Energie-Cités) and other groups (Urban Logement group in the European parliament) have been mentioned that can be useful for URBAN-NETs efforts in influencing and obtaining information.

National contact points for national dissemination

A system of national contact point has the advantage of being able to gather national information and share it across Europe. At the same time, URBAN-NET information and products can be disseminated properly in each country by these contact points. Thus, the system works both ways.

- The URBAN-NET dissemination activities need to focus on the core of the network, namely research. These results can of course also be disseminated to other networks, organisations and institutes dealing with urban issues.

Planning and inventory of actions

- Urban Development Group² – Reference framework for sustainable cities
- Joint programming: Cities of the Future/Urban Europe³
 - 19 March final presentation
 - May Final selection under Spanish Presidency
 - 25-26 May decision Competitive Council
